

Impressions of China 1983-2000

This book records the authors impressions of China, based on visits he made of a months duration every two years from 1983 - 2000, as well as on a years lecturing at the Shandong Teachers University, 1989-1990. It deals with areas he visited in the north and northeast; south, southeast and southwest; west and northwest of the country. It attempts to show that nature has endowed parts of China with an impressive scenery, matched by architectural wonders and engineering marvels of the Chinese themselves, ancient and modern. The book points, as well, to the bewildering array of problems which confront the leaders of the country -- social, economic, demographic, structural, financial -- all requiring immediate and simultaneous attention. Finally, the author reflects on the future of China -- where it might be heading, and ought to be heading.
