Some colleges have a formal veteran support office. Many don't. Some colleges have a veterans page on their website or they have a social club which is listed on the website. gibill.va.gov 888-gi-bill-1 studentveterans.org benefits.va.gov Newgibill.org, explains how the Post-9/11 GI Bill replaces the older Montgomery GI Bill system by providing veterans with up-front tuition payments directly to their schools.

Alternative Ways to Get College Credit Transfer Credits from a Previous School; Most accredited institutions will accept credits from either nationally or regionally accredited schools. As long as you earned a grade of C or better, you will probably be allowed to transfer the credits. Life/Work Experience: See the next section. It's called an experiential learning portfolio. Corporate Training; If you have achieved different certifications through your company, there is a chance that a college may allow these certification programs as college credits. Inquire with your Human Resource or Benefits Department whether specific schools they have a list of allows these courses as college credit. CLEP Tests; The College-Level Examination Program (CLEP) provides the opportunity for you to demonstrate achievement in a subject and receive the same amount of credit as a student who took the course and passed. More than 3000 U.S. colleges and universities recognize results from CLEP tests. All tests are administered by computer. Exams consist of mostly multiple choice or fill-in-the-blank questions. Tests are 90 minutes long. The only exception is the English Composition with Essay. The fee for each CLEP exam is $72. For eligible military service members and civilian employees, CLEP exams are free of charge. College Exams: Most schools also offer their own exams in order to allow students to test out of certain classes. Military Experience; Military courses might be valid for college credit. aarts.army.mil. The Armys Transcript Service uscg.mil/hq/cgi/ve/official_transcript.asp, CG Form 1564: Official USCG Transcript College Credit For Life Experience (Prior Learning) or Work Experience At one time before the internet took off, it was tedious to get college credit for life experiences. You had to either talk to an administrator or write your life experiences down or both then they decided how many credits they would give you but nowadays, in my opinion, its a growth industry. Both accredited and non-accredited colleges are offering credits for life experiences and even entire degrees for life experience for a fee of course. My only warning to you is if youre paying for a degree based on life experience or credits based on life experience, make sure the college is accredited such that the degree is legitimate and you can use it to get into grad school. If you have some life experiences through work, hobbies, volunteering, etc. that you deem worthwhile and gained some knowledge from them, you might be able to get college credit for them, however, the process is tedious because you have to document your experience with some kind of proof. Contact the Credit Evaluations Office at the college youre attending and ask about the procedure. Look through the college catalog and if you find any courses that roughly resemble knowledge youve already acquired in life, you might be able to get credit for it. Youll have to present your case in writing which includes a personal explanation of your experience plus any documentation/ proof that you might have. Be as specific as you can.
